PUEBLO VICTIM OF DISASTROUS FLOOD

THIRTY LIVES LOST--- PROPERTY DAMAGE IS MANY MILLIONS

Four Waves of Water Strike City, with Awful Consequences —Last Wave Today from Burst Dam Again Imperils the City

Troops Race With Death to Warn the Inhabitants—Engine Whistles Sound Note of Danger—City in Need of Food, Clothing, Water and Medical Aid

Known dead in the Colorado flood:

Pueblo, thirty-one; Willard, four. Total known dead, thirty-five.

Undetermined number reported missing.

Damage to property, farm lands, railroad, electric lines, telephone and telegraph systems and highways conservatively estimated at $50,000,000.

Pueblo, Col., June 6—Thirty-five are known to have drowned in the Colorado deluge according to a survey of the flooded area by the United Press at noon today.

Thirty-one of these bodies are at morgues in Pueblo and the other four in surrounding towns.

Hundreds are missing in the area but many of them may have fled to higher ground for safety.

Property loss in the flooded Colorado district is now placed at $50,000,000. It will take three days to completely check the casualty list.

Dam Breaks

Sweeping down the rampant Arkansas, a new wall of water let loose by the breaking of a dam above here, struck the city another blow early today. Pueblo's population, its nerves already shattered from the three days of fighting floods which took a toll of approximxately thirty-five lives and millions of dollars worth of property, was ordered to stand by.

Troops Warn Inhabitants

Troops raced with death in all directions to warn the inhabitants of the coming of a five foot wall of water Women and children, obtaining their first sleep since the flood broke Frida night, were aroused and ordered to higher ground. Engines raced up and down as far as the railroads had been repaired, their shrill whistles scunding a note of danger.

The water today reached its crest and started to recede again about 7 a. m. There have been four waves strike the city—two striking Friday night when the first cloud burst deluged the city; the second when a levee gave way, and the third when Beaver dam broke, thirty-five miles from the city Sunday afternoon. The second today came before the water had receded from Sunday's deluge. The roaring of the water could be heard in the First Baptist church, where the United Press office is established, half a mile from the river. No more lives were lost, and there was no additional property damage today, but the relief work was seriously hampered. Railroad construction to bring food from Colorado Springs was washed out. The city was in dire need today of food, clothing, water and medical aid. For three days Pueblo has been without electric light, power, water, gas, telephone or street car service. No mail has been received and steam railroad transportation to and from the city is paralyzed.

Every important wholesale mercantile house and the majority of the retail stores are ruined.

Several cases of diphtheria and pneumonia attacked the children especially.

As the warnings were sounded of the new flood mothers in some instances were forced to wrap their sick children in blankets and carry them to safety. One aged woman came to the United Press headquarters begging soldiers to permit her to risk the danger of the flood sweeping through the house in order that her grandchild, suffering with diphtheria might not be disturbed. Because of the danger she was ordered to move.

The spread of a new epidemic of diseases hung over Pueblo today with all modern sanitation facilities suspended. Women, children and men cold not wash their faces or hands. The only water available came in milk cans from Colorado Springs or from the surface and artesian wells.

The danger of an epidemic was increased by the scarcity of lime and other powerful disinfectants.

The Red Cross is on guard against a possible outbreak of typhoid fever among the refugees in all the institutions harboring the homeless.

Milk for babies is used almost immediately, there being no ice. Relief workers are considering erection of a refuge colony. Tents are arriving from Colorado Springs and the relief committee is mapping out a program for housing refugees.

A breach half a mile wide was driven in the levee by water and has placed the city at the mercy of every little freshet along the head waters of the Arkansas.

The city's coal supply was running low. This together with shortage of ice, gas and other commodities will result in serious spread of disease, health officers say, unless steam railroad transportation is restored.

One hundred and twenty-five militia men and rangers patrol the flooded district—virtually a no man's land, strewn with mounds of debris, torn up railroad tracks, gutted buildings and ruined merchandise.

As soon as united efforts toward clearing away the wreckage is launched another downpour or another flood comes driving the workers to cover. Three times Sunday it poured rain. Sunday's flood nearly reached the border of Friday's overflow.

Authorities in touch with the situation up and down the river believe that the worst of the flood is over unless new rains set in. The city, restless from feverish sleep looked with dread upon the coming of night. The danger of the flood made hideous the coming of night. The notes of the bugle calling for shift of guard duty last night brought women rushing to the doors of their nomes wondering if it was a new alarm for people to flee. Oil lamps burned all night in some homes. Sleep was impossible. Families divided watch duty throughout the night so escape from a new flood would be speedy in case the water should rise.

Down town the tension was even greater. Armed sentries challenged every pedestrian or motorist and required a display of military passports at every block.

The darkness was more intense over the flood area. The north and south sides of the city were cut off during the night by water. Passage of row boats was not even attempted because of the danger of the whirling waters. With the fall of night rumors of the number of dead increased.

Speculation regarding the state of the farmers and tourists in nearby portions which ewere cut off from communication caused whispered aarm.

Platte River Overflows Bank

Denver, Colo, June 6—Police guards were thrown around the danger zone in the Platte river bottom early today as the stream overflowed part of the railroad yards. Families in the district were warned to be ready to leave in a few minutes notice if the stream continued to rise. The Platte river and Cherry Creek which run through the southwest have been tank full for the last three days. Railroad tracks have been washed away and many residents report several streams continue to rise.

Little Damage in Kansas

Wichita, Kan., June 6—Except that many bridges are being washed out the flood is doing little damage in western Kansas, according to special dispatches today.

At Syracuse, 35 miles east of the state line, the Arkansas river has risen five feet in the last twelve hours. It comes at the rate of an inch an hour. The river is not expected to rise more than eight feet. It must rise over ten feet to cause great damage.

Colorado River Over Banks

Topeka, Kan., June 6—The Colorado flood was sweeping over river banks of Kansas today according to reports by local railroad officials.

Sante Fe general office officials here, with only one telephone line remaining intact in the flooded district, were trying desperately to keep in touch with the situation.

No trains were being run west of Dodge City and California passengers are being routed via Amarillo, Texas. More than 100 miles of Sante Fe track was said to be under water between Pueblo and the Kansas line.

Hutchinson would probably not get the flood water before Tuesday night, it was said.

FLOOD DANGER OVER EPIDEMICS THREATEN

(United Press)

Pueblo, June 6—The flood danger in this stricken city appeared to be over late today and gave way to a threatened scourage of epidemics.

Concentration of refugees in camps under guard of troops were ordered by Col. Patrick Hamock to check and prevent disease.

Pick and shovel brigades attacked the mud and debris in the flooded area this afternoon. The military authorities have ordered every able bodied man to help dig Pueblo out of the mud. The death toll of Friday night stood at 35. City Councilman Pressey, director of the casualty division of Pueblo's relief organization, fears many bodies were washed down the stream.

"I cannot account for the small number of bodies found except on assumption that many victims were swept town the river," said Pressey. "A complete clean up in the city and the giving up by the river of its dead will wind up the death toll."

The water supply still remains very critical. A few blocks down town were being served from partly repaired city water plants this afternoon, but the great majority of people were dependent on streams and wells.

Suit Dropped Against American Can Company

(United Press)

Washington, June 6—The federal government in the supreme court today dropped its anti trust suit against the American Can Company.

In lower court the government failed to obtain a decision against the company and today asked the court to dismiss its appeal. The motion made by Solicitor General Frierson and was immediatel granted.

TREES GIVEN EXPERT CARE

Body of Public-Spirited Los Angeles Men Recognizes the Importance of the Work.

Recognizing that the average citizen, or average laboring man, knows little or nothing about moving trees, a group of Los Angeles men have organized a company which has for its purpose the transplanting of trees, and the removal of trees and stumps about the city.

The tree and stump company is a decidedly mobile organization. Its men travel in automobiles, carrying their tools and tree-moving machinery in trailers behind the cars. Thus equipped they are prepared to go quickly to any location about the city wherever their services are required.

The mechanical appliances of tree transplanting, and tree and stump removal, are few and simple. There is an abundance of block-and-tackle equipment for the handling of large heavy trees, and a compact windlass of special design is used for pulling trees out by the roots.

When a tree is merely to be removed, a stream of water played from a hose is used to dislodge the earth from the roots. If the tree has to be moved any great distance, heavy wire netting is wrapped about the roots to hold the earth intact. This is then re-enforced with rope, and the tree is jacked onto roller dollies for transportation. At its new location the wire netting is removed, and blocks and tackle are used to hoist it into position.—John Edwin Hogg in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

NEGRO PULLMAN PORTERPULLED WOMEN AND CHILDREN OUT UNTIL HIT BY FALLING TELEPHONE POLE

(By United Press)

Pueblo, June 6—A. H. Russell of Denver described to the United Press today the destruction of two passenger trains that stood in the yards here when the wall of water broke.

"In a few minutes we were standing knee deep, then we went to the roof. I remember there were seven little children on the train. We got them to safety."

"I think we might have escaped without much of a wreck but for the washing of a huge pile of lumber against a train standing on the track near us. Its passengers had been scared to the roof when the pile of lumber was hurled against their train. For a time I didn't see much hopes for us. There were screams mingled with the roaring of water and breaking of windows."

"Some men from a packing plant witnessed the whole thing. They waded waste deep to our aid. The coach toppled over on its side making a bank along which the water swept past those of us struggling on the far side of the cars. I think that is what saved most of us. I saw a negro porter pull women and children out of the wreckage. Then a telephone pole fell and hit him on the head knocking him int othe water."

STATE INSPECTS BRAINERD DAIRIES

Peter Schletty, State Inspector, Spent Greater Part of Last Week in Brainerd

CHEMIST ACCOMPANIED HIM

Twenty-eight Samples Tested, Eight Gave Suspicious Evidence of Containing Water

The state has just finished an inspection of Brainerd dairies. Peter Schletty, the state inspector, spent the greater part of last week in Brainerd checking up on some of the dairies he had inspected on two previous visits and visiting new ones. He brought with him a chemist, Mr. Kueffner, who tested the samples as he secured them. Twenty-eight samples were tested. Twenty of them were all right, eight of the samples showed suspiciously of water in the milk and they were sent to St. Paul where they might have the sure water test, the chemist not having the appliances for that with him.

On his previous visit sanitary notices had been served. Ten had complied, bringing their dairies up to a sanitary state, two had quit, and three had not complied. This will be work for the local dairy inspector to take up. Four new sanitary notices were served.

Out of the ten people who had complied with the demand for a milk house, eight stated that they were glad that they were compelled to do so. They stated that it made the work much easier and thew saw the benefit. Two did not express themselves.

One of the four new places visited was found to be in a frightful condition of sanitation.

Several of the places visited before were in very bad state but have complied with every phase and might almost be termed model dairies. It is expected that the State Dairy Inspector will perhaps make one more visit to Brainerd to aid the City Milk Inspector in finishing up some of the work he has begun.

In all this work he was assisted by the city heatlh nurse, Miss Michael, who drove him to the dairies, visited the places with him and received information which will be of value in keeping up a good supply of milk. It is expected that the city health nurse will be able to co-operate with the city inspector in seeing the production of milk is under proper conditions.

The bringing of the chemist was something new but Mr. Schletty stated that he wanted to give Brainerd a thorough going over before the city took it up and so make it easier for the city to secure the results desired.

ST. CLOUD GETS 9 BRAINERD 4

Saintly City Aggregation Sunday Afternoon Defeated the Locals on St. Cloud Grounds

EMERY BALL WAS BEING USED

Brainerd's Whole Staff of Pitchers Thrown into the Breach by Manager Andrew Smraker

St. Cloud won 9 to 4 from Brainerd Sunday afternoon at St. Cloud and Manager Andrew Smraker flung his whole staff of pitchers in the breach to stem the tide, but was unable to overcome the rush.

"St. Cloud", said Smraker, "has a team that does not stack up with some of the best we have played this season and had Brainerd's moundsmen delivered the goods as they have in the past, there would have been a different story to tell".

St. Cloud, said Smraker, flashed out the old emery ball stunt and he called the turn on Spencer, the imported St. Paul pitcher. Smraker tossed one of the balls away, said he, and nother was used, which Smraker said was also dusted with emery. Wadsworth was Spencer's battery mate.

Here is the score by innings:

Brainerd 011 000 101	4	7	4
St. Cloud 114 201 00x	9	13	6

Batteries—Gustafson, Stallman, Molstad and Gaskill; Spencer and Wadsworth.

Hits off Gustafson were 4 in 2 1-3 innings; off Stallman 2 in 2-3 inning; off Molstad 7 in 6 innings. Gustafson walked 3 men and Molstad one man.

GARDEN WORK MEANS HEALTH

Benefits of Cultivation, Even of Small Plot, Have Been Proved to Be Many.

Community gardens have been encouraged in the city of Philadelphia for the last twenty-three years, primarily as a means of helping people to help themselves.

The same class of work has been carried on in other cities for shorter periods of time, with an equal degree of success and satisfaction, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

The original object in every case was to help the people to provide food at home, but incidentally and unexpectedly a number of other benefits which in their way have proved of greater value than the original purpose have developed.

These have to do with the health and pleasure of the families of the gardeners as a result of their outdoor exercise and contact with nature.

A game of golf is all right as a constitutional for those who can afford it. The number, however, who play golf is small as compared with the thousands of those who take their exercise and outdoor life cultivating gardens.

The cultivation of the garden also has the advantage that it adds to the wealth of both the gardeners and the nation.

Canada's Land and Water Area

The total land area of Canada is 3,603,910 square miles; the total water area is 125,755 square miles—that is, the total water area is about equal to one-half the total area of Saskatchewan.

Buttercups and Gold Mines.

With many readers brilliancy of style passes for affluence of thought: they mistake buttercups in the grass for immeasurable gold mines under the ground.—Longfellow.

Milwaukee's Shade Trees.

Milwaukee has 82,392 shade trees on its streets and boulevards. This does not include trees in the city parks or on private property. The varieties are: Elm, 45 per cent; soft maple, 18; box elder, 9; basswood, 7; ash, 5; poplar, 4. The forestry department favors elm. Beginning April 1, the department will plant 3,000 trees, of which 2,000 will be elm, 500 norway maple and 250 each ash and basswood. The trees are planted 35 to 40 feet apart, no tree being planted less than 20 feet from a corner. The cost is assessed to the property owner. The city specifies the variety to be used on each street, so as to obtain uniformity.

Firefly Illumination.

The firefly is a well-known beetle of the elateridae family, which is able to throw out a strong and apparently phosphorescent light in the dark. The illumination is intermittent, and appears to be under the control of the insect's nervous system. Both the male and the female fireflies emit light, as well as their larvae, the eggs being luminous even while still in the body.

Lowe Brothers

Cost of Barn Paint
A new way to figure it

Take a pencil and paper in one hand, and put down the cost per gallon. Take a brush and a half pint can of any paint. Now paint the side of your barn as far as the paint will go. Then measure the space, and mark it down.

Now take a half pint can of Lowe Brothers Barn Paint, and do the same thing. In doing, it, compare the ease with which Lowe's spreads on, and how thoroughly it covers. Take particular notice of how you can brush it out so much farther than the other paint.

Now measure the space Lowe's covered. Compare it with the other.

After which, if you don't paint all your barns with Lowe Brothers Barn Paint, it will be because of some reason all your own.

Come in and get a color card. It's free.

¶ Having passed through a period without parallel, no one knows what "normal" is. Whatever one's opinion may be regarding the length of time it will take to get all business back on a stable basis—and many conflicting opinions are expressed daily—there is no doubt whatever that the individual and corporation which renders the greatest service during this readjustment period will secure the best results.

¶ This is a time for faith—faith in our country and its unbounded resources—faith in our government—faith in our men of business—faith in each other—and last, but by no means least, faith in ourselves—faith in our individual ability to improve conditions.

¶ Believing that the country is sound and that our faith, backed by vigorous action in close co-operation, will result in mutual good, we are prepared to extend such additional credit help as may be necessary—not because we are imbued with any uncommon spirit, but because the situation calls for such mutual effort and common sense,—because, in a word, that is our idea of good business.

MILK INSPECTION

The news item on another page of the Dispatch showing the results of the inspetcion of milk and dairies in Brainerd shows the wisdom of the city council in passing the milk ordinance. Milk is a vital food, especially to the infants and an impure supply is sure to breed disease. A careful reading of the ordinance will not show that any injustice is being done to the dairies while if enforced it will produce a good clean supply.

We hope the council will appoint a milk inspector who will do his duty thoroughly ,one who will not take the position merely as a job but one who will see in it the opportunity to serve the public.

Brainerd citizens should take much pleasure in knowing that they now have a pure water supply and the support of the milk ordinance will give them a pure milk supply.

HOME TOWN HELPS

TO STANDARDIZE ROAD SIGNS

Warnings and Directions Are to Be Simplified for the Benefit of British Motorists.

Many motorists in the United States will envy the system of road signs about to be put in effect by the British ministry of transport. Standardization of the signs and their position is the object in view.

Sign Warning British Motorists of Approach to School.

The British countryside, like our own, has been festooned with a varied series of signs of warning and direction. Motor car clubs and advertisers have posted their own placards regardless of others on the spot. The confusing information presented has resulted in a certain amount of disregard of the signs.

Definite proposals have been laid down in regard to height, color, position of arms, inscriptions, etc., of directing posts, and they are to be applicable throughout England. An example is the red triangle, which is a danger signal. Beneath the triangle is some clear symbol to be used to indicate the particular kind of danger to be guarded against, with lettering beneath the symbol. Thus, a representation of the flaming torch of learning, beneath the red triangle, will warn the motorist of the approach to a school.

Quaint signs now found on English lanes, in spite of the charm they have, according to the plan will have to be sacrificed to the fact that after all a road is a means by which one goes from one place to another, and that any aids to that purpose should be adopted.

Serbian Melodies Solemn.

The Serbian melodies are solemn and impressive, and have a strong affinity with their church music. The Hungarian songs, on the other hand, show vitality and impetuosity to an extraordinary degree. They are mostly in two-four time, but both the rhythms and the time change continually, and the music is full of pauses at effective moments and of modulations into unexpected keys, which correspond to constant changes in the sentiment of the songs, from deep sorrow to wild hilarity of satire. The "Hungarian Melodies," by Francis Korbay, contain very fine examples of such music, and the accompaniments of the songs in this collection are beautifully and thoroughly adapted to the melodies.

WHO IS TO BE CHIEF JUSTICE?

PROMOTION IS NOT LIKELY

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington.—Washington's interest, or a part of it at least, centers today on the vacancy in the seat of chief justice of the United States Supreme court. Whom is President Harding to appoint to take the vacant chair?

Inasmuch as the present administration is Republican, it seems to be taken for granted that a Republican will be given the high place. Of course it is always possible that a President may promote one of the associate justices and then fill the associate's seat with a new appointment. President Taft did this in his day. If President Harding should follow suit, of course, it is within the range of possibilities that he might promote an associate justice who is a Democrat to the chief justiceship, and then appoint a Republican as associate justice.

Circumstances make it appear today that the President does not intend to do this, but will give the vacancy to some one from outside the court. The reasons for this thought are plain. The desire is always in the appointment of a chief justice to give the place to some man who is vigorous and who has presumably a long lease of bench life ahead of him. If President Harding should appoint an associate justice to the chief place he either would be compelled to take an elderly man of long service, or a younger man of comparatively short service and promote him over the heads of his seniors on the bench.

Three Prominently Mentioned.

The names most frequently mentioned for appointment to the chief justiceship are those of former President of the United States William H. Taft, Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, and former United States Senator George Sutherland of Utah.

Men whose position in the Republican party make it seem fairly certain that they know the inclinations of the President say that if Mr. Hughes had not been appointed secretary of state he could be certain today that the chief place on the bench awaits him. It will be remembered that Hughes resigned from the Supreme court in order to accept the Republican nomination for President in 1916. It always has been believed that Mr. Hughes would like to return to the bench, but just now he has a high and heavy job on his hands, and he may feel, as it is believed the President feels, that he should stay to finish it.

Years ago Theodore Roosevelt offered to put William H. Taft on the Supreme bench of the United States. At that time Taft had a Philippine task on his hands which he desired to finish. If he had taken the place on the bench which President Roosevelt offered him the subsequent history of the Republican party might have been different. There might have been no Bull Moose party and no rupture of Republicanism.

Many Changes in Twenty Years.

There have been many changes in the personnel of the United States Supreme court within the last 20 years. President Roosevelt appointed William Henry Moody of Massachusetts, who had been in the cabinet as attorney general. Justice Moody had not been long on the bench when he became seriously ill and was compelled to retire. What is said to have been a precedent was broken in Moody's case. He was ill, but was under the retiring age of seventy years. He had little or no private means. There was special legislation to enable him to retire on his pay as an associate justice of the United States.

President Taft made four appointments to the Supreme bench, and in addition to this promoted Associate Justice White to the chair of chief justiceship. Mr. Taft's appointments were Associate Justices Willis Van Deventer of Wyoming, Mahlon Pitney of New Jersey, Horace H. Lurton of Tennessee and Joseph R. Lamar of Georgia. Of these the first two named were Republicans and the last two were Democrats. It is said that Judge Lurton had not been active politically for a good many years. He died before he had been long on the bench. Justice Lamar also lived only a short time after his appointment to the Supreme bench.

President Wilson named three associate justices of the Supreme court, James C. Reynolds of Tennessee, Louis D. Brandeis of Massachusetts and John H. Clarke of Ohio.

There are several associate justices of the United States Supreme court who today are well past the age at which under the law they may retire. It is possible, therefore, perhaps probable, that within the next four years President Harding will have several vacancies to fill on the bench of the highest court in the land.

STIRRING WESTERN DRAMA

The New Park Theatre Offers Wild West and a Handful of Laughs Tonight

Do you like western drama in pictures?

If you do, there is a corking good one coming to the New Park tonight in "The Freeze Out" starring Harry Carey, whose specialty is depicting virile western character.

Manager Workman is announcing this bill for just what it is, one of the very best of this class of pictures, filled with incidents and climaxes which will cause your pulses to twinge, and with splendid shots of western scenery and wild riding. Many people are fond of this kind of pictures when well done and they will see something superior in western drama in "The Freeze Out."

With the main event there will be the successful burlesque comedy, "April Fool" a great laugh producer, just to put you in good humor after the tense excitement of the dramatic main event.

GRIFFITH PICTURE TOMORROW

"The Love Flower," With "How the World Looks to An Ant", and "Katzies" at New Park

Evidently the maangement of the New Park theatre is living up to its promise in the claim that their theatre has been named a "Class A" house. Just to show what "Class A" means when a house is given that distinction, glance for a moment at the bill for Tuesday and Wednesday. In an ordinary theatre the bill would be exploited as a "super-special feature" and a double prices charged.

"But when your house is rated 'Class A'" said Manager Workman today, "you don't do that kind of a stunt, you just go along with a big show as usual. It's what your patrons have coming to them from you. A 'Class A' manager must give his patrons the best there is, just as a matter of course."

The beautiful pulse-inspiring drama, "The Love Flower" a costly Griffith masterpiece played for a long run in NewYork when first given to the public at $2 a seat and it will be shown intact tomorrow and Wednesday at regular prices. It is a very unusual romantic story with scenes laid in the tropics and with some very startling swimming and deep sea diving by the heroine and three of the men in which is shown a battle beneath the waves between the girl and an officer seeking to imprison her father. To tell the plot would be to spoil the surprises abounding in the drama.

Aside from the main event there is a most unusual feature film, showing how the world looks to an ant—a marvelous piece of microscopic animated photography that every school girl and boy should not fail to see, nor any adult miss. Then there will be one of those laughable "Katzenjammer" animated cartoons. And there is not one cent advance in price. Manager Workman absoutely guarantees it is by far the greatest picture bill in town this week.

FINE GOWNS WORN IN "FORBIDDEN FRUIT"

Leading Women Players in Film Charmingly Costumed

Gowns of surpassing beauty are shown in "Forbidden Fruit," which comes to the Lyceum theatre Monday and Tuesday. They were designed by Clare West.

Agnes Ayres, Kathlyn Williams and Shannon Day play the principal feminine roles in "Forbidden Fruit," and the major portion of the gowns, negligees and other appurtenances of my lady's wardrobe were designed for them.

Perhaps the most striking gown is an ermine and sable negligee which Miss Ayres wears through much of the action. All of Miss West's creations are of the ultra-modern, superfashionable type. Of another type are the gorgeous costumes of another period designed by Theodore Kosloff and executed by Clare West for the Cinderella vision which forms an important part of the story.

Fine Photography

Excellent photography by Alvin Wyckoff and Alvin Struss distinguishes Cecil B. DeMille's superb Paramount picture, "Forbidden Fruit."

Deadly Duel Between Eagles.

Two eagles have had a fight to the death at Invergarry, Inverness-shire, wires a London Daily Chronicle correspondent. Within a few yards of a road a boy, the son of a herd keeper, saw two golden eagles engaged in a fierce combat. He watched the struggle, and saw one of the birds fall on its back dead in a ditch. Its adversary, with beak fast in the other's throat, then stood triumphantly on the victim's breast.

TO ASK FRANCHISE FOR GAS PLANT

Fred W. Freese of Fort Wayne, Indiana, Gas Works Engineer and Contractor in City

AT COUNCIL MEETING TONIGHT

Has Option on the A. G. Whitney Plant and Properties—Rates to be Considered

Brainerd may soon have gas restored to the city and the gas plant at the river in operation.

Fred W. Freese of Fort Wayne, Indiana, a well known gas engineer and contractor, has secured an option on the Brainerd Gas & Electric Co. plant and holdings in which A. G. Whitney of St. Cloud was largely interested.

Mr. Freese is no novice at building up plants and putting them on a business like plant. He took hold of the property at Sheridan, Wyoming, and in two years built up a satisfied group of gas users and put the plant on a paying basis, giving good service.

He built gas plants at Escanaba, Mich.; Hastings, Mich.; Albion, Mich.; Cadillac, Mich.; Provo, Utah, Laport, Ind.; Connorsville, Ind.; Bloomington, Ind.

If Mr. Freese yets a gas franchise in Brainerd, he states he will start up quickly. He has arrangements with Fort Wayne, Ind.; shops to ship within 13 days of ordering, the necessary gas holder and gas compressor. He estimates he will be making gas within six weeks from the time the franchise is granted.

The matter of rates will be thoroughly discussed, and other things entertaining into a proposed franchise, all coming up at the city council meeting this evening.

Strachan-Clark

The marriage of Miss Helen Strachan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Strachan, 725 East First street, to John Gordon Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Clark of St. Cloud, was solemnized at high noon Wednesday at St. Paul's church. Rev. Albert W. Ryan read the service in the presence of the immediate family. The vows were exchanged before an improvised altar of pink.

Miss Lucile Strachan was her sister's only attendant, and the bridegroom had as his best man his brother, Donald. The bride wore her traveling suit of brown tricotine with a hat of the same shade, and a corsage bouquet of brides roses.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Clark of St. Cloud, parents of the bridegroom; his sister, Miss Helen Clark; and his brother Donald.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Strachan were hosts at luncheon at the Kitchi Gammi club to the members of the family. Pink and white was the color motif used in the table appointments.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark will spend the summer at Grand Lake, and will be at home at St. Cloud after Sept. 1. Mrs. Clark is a graduate of Macalester college. Mr. Clark served two years as an ensign in the war.—Duluth News-Tribune.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Slovak Girl in National Dress.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Czechoslovakia, which has recently lifted a ban against the importation of American cotton, may thus become one of the first of the Central European countries to start in motion the stream of products between America and that portion of the world.

Because it is a colorful country with quaint people and customs and costumes, observers have often written almost exclusively of these phases of life in the new nation. But it is also industrially of great importance. This is especially true of the Czech part, which is usually called Bohemia. It was the workshop of Austria-Hungary. If you saw an Austrian velour hat on Broadway or an Austrian-made Turkish fez beside the Golden Horn, the chances were four to one that it was produced in what is now Czechoslovakia since four-fifths of the industries of the former Hapsburg monarchy were concentrated there.

Textiles formed the largest group of prewar industrial products, and made the country an important customer for the cotton exported from our southern states. It is estimated that about one million bales of cotton are required each year to keep the Czechoslovakian textile factories busy.

The textile industry is centered at Bratislava, which is Czechoslovakia's main port on the Danube, to which vessels of a thousand tons can come at all seasons. In spite of the financial difficulties of Central Europe a market for the finished product seems assured. Every country in Central Europe needs textiles.

Skoda Works Transformed.

The great Skoda munition works at Pilsen, the main source of Austro-Hungarian war materials, were as famous in their way as the Krupp factories at Essen, Germany. They are still fully capable of making some of the most powerful of war engines, but in these days of peace for Czechoslovakia there has been a striking transformation. While guns and swords are not literally being beaten into plowshares, the machinery which has turned out every variety of ordnance in the past is now busily engaged in making tools, locomotives, car wheels, printing presses, and various other implements of industry, transportation, and enlightenment.

Bohemia is known, too, for its glass. One of the important centers of glass factories is what a younger generation of geography students were taught to call Carlsbad, one of the world's best known watering places. The town's new Czechoslovakian name is Karlovy Vary, a change which to the outsider seems very much like the deliberate destruction of a valuable trade-mark. Czechoslovakian glass is best known, perhaps, by two special products, the so-called amethyst glass and emerald glass.

Sugar, Beer and Water.

In the northern portion of the republic, near large fields of sugar beets, are located numerous sugar factories which turn out large quantities of this product. Before the war about $10,000,000 worth of sugar was sent out annually from the territory which now constitutes Czechoslovakia. One of the most recent suggestions for facilitating the export of American cotton to Czechoslovakia is that sugar from that country be exchanged for the cotton.

The name alone of Pilsen (now Plzen) tells in part the story of another important industry of Czechoslovakia. It is the raising of hops, the preparation of malt and the brewing of the famous Pilsner and other beers. Both the raw materials and the finished products have always been exported in large quantities. An industry that may seem in a way a striking contrast to that of brewing, is the sale of waters from the famed springs of the new republic. Bottling mineral water may not sound like a big industry but the mineral waters of the Bohemian and Moravian health resorts are widely sold. One peculiar thing in traveling in Europe is that on the restaurant cars one is forced to drink the mineral water of the country through which he is passing.

Slovakian Paper Industry.

Slovakia is not so highly organized along industrial lines as is Bohemia but it has vast forests and already there are many paper mills, some of them still running under the old Hungarian names. But these are all small affairs and so far the paper and wood pulp industry has not been developed to anything like the proportions which could be reached in a stable, industrious Europe. In Slovakia, too, one may see bentwood chairs being made for the American market.

Czechoslovakia is short of coal but this may be a good thing in the long run, for Slovakia is one vast storehouse of hydraulic power and there is enough unused water power among the Slovakian hills and in the fashionable high Tatra region to run all the factories that are likely to be started for a long time to come. The Tatra mountains are rivals of the Swiss Alps for scenery. There the wealth and aristocracy of Hungary have been accustomed to go for generations for mountain-climbing and other outdoor recreations.

While Bohemia, the land of the Czechs, is predominantly an industrial country, Slovakia, the home of the Slovak portion of the partnership is at present chiefly agricultural. There are to be found the quaintest and most artistic of the peasant costumes of the republic, which are a never-ending delight. The men wear white shirts, embroidered at wrists and throat and faultlessly laundered, a thickly braided vest, wide white trousers, high boots, and a round topped hat circled by a wide figured band.

How the Women Dress.

The women run the whole gamut of color and a group of them makes a picture on which the eye must linger. Their skirts of plain black reach only a few inches below the knees. Just below the waist is a line of fine embroidery. Their stockings are thick and serviceable. Some have small square colored designs knitted into the dull black. Their shoes are stout and usually high cut. High soft leather boots are worn by some. The jacket which reaches to the waist may also be plain except for an applique design of hand-made lace.

Where then is the colorfulness of the women's costumes? It is in the gay and striking head-dress and apron. White and red are the favorite colors for the head shawls, but the aprons—the real adornment for which the other clothes seem merely the background—are every color under heaven—bright green, changeable to gold; yellow with a silver overlight, pink, blue, cerise and all the other colors that feminine fancy may choose. When a few hundred of these gaily-colored aprons are displayed in one moving picture, the scene is a charming one indeed.

The hand-work that of old was put upon women's costumes, utilizing as its materials home-made vegetable dyes, produced artistic results. But with the growth of industrialism less and less of this old-fashioned work is being done. Aniline dyes are being substituted and machinery is being called upon to turn out its products quickly and in great volume. The factories, too, are attracting to the towns the women who would have engaged in the home work. Thus gradually the arts of the past are being lost.

Even from the tiny villages of Slovakia, hitherto the stronghold of rural customs, young girls are going to the cities. They have neither time nor energy to do the fine needlework that made their mother's costumes things of beauty, nor money to purchase similar clothes made by others. They are coming more and more to wear white hats with wide brims, spotlessly white dresses, and white stockings and slippers. These newer costumes are charming but lack the beauty and individuality of the old.

A KNIGHT

By RACHEL E. BAKER.

(©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When she was powerless to resist, her parents christened her Priscilla Willoughby. As she grew older her playmates stumbled over the stately name until they shortened it to Pussy, to which someone tacked Willow, and Pussy Willow she had been from that time to all her friends. But Priscilla was not thinking of her name today as she faced her room of sixty first-graders.

"I am going to try another nature lesson today," she said, and before her mind's eye rose a vision of her last attempt. The geranium had quite unexpectedly put forth a pink bud, and she had attempted to show her class the beauty of it, quite forgetting the pretty green smock and pink tie that she herself had worn.

"I am thinking of something that is very beautiful," she had said.

"Yes," the class beamed in sympathy.

"You have all seen it before at school." They were not quite sure.

"You can see it today," continued the teacher, remembering that sometimes she put it on a shelf in the back of the room.

Yes they could see it today all right.

"It is beautiful and part of it is a lovely green"—a chorus of lifted hands interrupted her—"and right in the center of it is a dainty bit of pink. . . ."

Every hand shot into the air at that, and as one voice they had shouted, "Miss Willoughby's waist."

Sixty little faces glowed up at her. Rosy from recent washing, they somehow reminded her of cherubs, and again of very precious little cups into which she was to pour the wine of knowledge.

"Now, this morning I want you to put your thinking caps on. Remember to tie them carefully under your chins. Last Tuesday we talked about the geranium." All eyes sought the window, then turned to consider Miss Willoughby, but, no, she wasn't wearing the green smock this morning.

"I want you all to look carefully at my dress. I am going to tell you about something that is just the same color as my dress."

They eyed it appreciatively.

"Is it silk?" queried Rebecca Slovsky. "Can I feel of it?"

"Yes," consented Miss Willoughby, "because the thing I am going to tell of is just as soft as my dress. I will walk slowly up the aisle and each of you may put your hand on my dress.

"Please, Miss Willoughby, Johnny squashed a cho'late in his hand," announced Katie Flannagan, trembling for the precious dress.

Johnnie admitted his guilt, and his little face looked so unhappy that to prevent the shower she saw impending there, Miss Willoughby sent him off to the lavatory whence he soon returned, and relief settled upon the class once more.

All were ready for the great adventure and Miss Willoughby walked slowly down each aisle. Timidly the little hands went out to touch the beautiful dress, and great joy swelled each breast as they patted the soft fabric with their little starfish hands. Miss Willoughby took her place in front of the class.

"Who can tell me something about the dress?"

"It's silk," asserted Rebecca. Teacher acknowledged it.

"It's soft as my kitty," murmured Johnnie, thinking out loud.

"It's very much like your kitty and it lives out in the woods. It's just the color of my dress, and it's just as soft as my dress. Can you tell me what it is?"

They stared at her in bewilderment and she went quickly to her desk and produced a brown branch on which were several pussy willows. She told them the name and allowed each to feel of the tiny velvety toes.

"See if you can find some for me and bring them to school tomorrow."

* * * * * * *

She sat at her desk correcting their number work, now that the day's work was over. A tap sounded and to her "Come in" there entered an astonishing figure, little Johnnie, muddy as to legs, perspiring and red as to face. He held his hand extended in front of him as he stumbled up to the teacher's desk.

"What is it, Johnnie? Something for me?"

"Yes, Miss Will'by. I got some just like your dress but it was a long ways."

His perspiring face mutely questioned if this were good or evil in her sight, and his tight little fist slowly disclosed before her astonished gaze five little pussy willows, crumpled as to fur, bereft of their brown sheaf but still pussy willows.

"Where did you get them?"

"Down by Miller's River," her face grew white, "and I slipped in the mud and 'most fell in, but I crept back on my hands and knees, and I got them for you." His adoring eyes rested on her face.

A wise teacher does not kiss a gentleman of six, even if he has risked his life for her, and if her hand rested more caressingly than usual upon his sturdy little shoulder, Johnnie did not know it.

"Some day, Johnnie, you will grow up and be a big, brave man, and when a beautiful lady asks you to do great deeds you will do them, but you will never make anyone happier than you do your teacher today. You are my little knight of the pussy willow."

OF NARROW MIND

Writer Denies Lenin Any Element of Greatness.

Tragedy in His Early Life Largely Influenced the Actions of Sinister Russian Revolutionist.

Lenin, that extraordinary Russian, is well enough known to the world as politician and leader, but little known as a personality. W. H. F. Basevi, in the Forum, discloses some interesting facts regarding the educational and moral influences that early shaped the character of this sinister revolutionary and that went toward the making of the man who has turned the tremendous tide of a vast empire.

"Until 1917," writes Mr. Basevi, "he was merely one of a host of disgruntled exiles, wanderers in foreign lands, who lived from hand to mouth by free-lance journalism, or picked up a precarious livelihood as tourists' guides or by lecturing and teaching Russian, assisted at infrequent and uncertain intervals by remittances from reluctant relatives, and loans from friends. Driven by poverty as well as by conviction to join the underworld of revolutionary intriguers, and to join in plots against the government wherever they might be, they were always under surveillance by the police, and were compelled to change their names as frequently as their homes in order to evade pursuit and gain a little respite."

And continuing, Mr. Basevi says:

"Vladimir Ilyitch Ulianoff, whose nom de guerre is Lenin, is the son of a member of the lower order of the hereditary nobility. The father apparently had revolutionary theories which Lenin and his elder brother put into practice. The two boys were educated at the Kazan university, and here occurred a tragedy which was probably the turning point in Lenin's career. His elder brother was executed for complicity in a plot to assassinate the czar, Alexander III. It is not difficult to understand the effect of this distressing event upon an emotional and courageous youth, already convinced that absolutism was the cause of all the troubles in his unhappy country. In his eyes, his brother was a martyr, and he himself was ready for the same fate. But martyrdom was not his fate. If that is yet to come, if he is to meet his death by assassination, which is so frequently the end of revolutionaries, it will come by a strange irony, not in the cause of liberty, but for exercising a despotic tyranny unknown in all the history of the czars. Lenin was expelled from the Kazan university for participating in a political demonstration. He studied law at the University of Petrograd, and in later years was exiled to Siberia for his connection with revolutionaries in Switzerland. Much of his life was spent abroad, and he married a woman who had been exiled for voicing extreme opinions. . . .

"What Robespierre was to Gamelin Evariste, Karl Marx and Engels are to Lenin. From his own writings it is evident that he is a man with a narrow but acute intellect, and possesses the purely deductive type of mind. His tendency is to discard all complex and confusing facts, and for the sake of clearness and simplicity to consider life and men as abstractions. . . .

"To Lenin, Marx and Engels are the prophets of a new religion, and Das Kapital a holy Koran, every word inspired. To criticize it is blasphemy; to differ from it the most damnable of heresies. It is the first word and the last, the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end of economic doctrine. The entire domination which these works exercise over his intellectual faculties is evident throughout his writings. To confute an adversary he quotes a text and feels the matter is settled."

Maxim Gorky.

"Maxim Gorky," who was reported to be on his way to England on a visit to H. G. Wells, but is still held up by the Bolshevist authorities on the frontier, is Alexei Pyeshkof, the poet and chronicler of the pariahs and vagabonds of Russian society, says Living Age.

"Gorky" means "bitter." The full name, "Maxim Gorky," may, perhaps, be read to mean "the bitterest of the bitter." The pseudonym effectively symbolizes Pyeshkof's attitude toward life, for his fiction is the distilled essence of the disappointed.

He was not at first a Bolshevik, and he seems only to have joined the Bolshevist ranks under pressure. Given his choice between low diet and high office, he preferred the latter, which is one, happily, that does not require him to take active part in the perpetration of atrocities.

Immense Loss by Fire.

Fires in the United States in five years have destroyed property worth nearly $1,500,000,000. Electricity is given as the chief cause of fires, with "matches-smoking" second; defective chimneys and flues, third; stoves, furnaces, boilers and pipes fourth; spontaneous combustion, fifth; lightning, sixth; sparks on roofs, seventh, and petroleum and its products, eighth.

Back to the Mines.

"Well, Rastus, I hear you are working again. What business are you engaged in now?"

"I'se done be in de mining business, sah."

"What kind of mining are you doing—gold, silver or diamond?"

"I'se doing calsomining, sah."

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hoffbauer and children and Miss Emily Lewis visited Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Peterson at their farm home on Lake Williams near Akeley Saturday and Sunday. They returned home Sunday evening and were accompanied by Mrs. Peterson and daughter Florence who will visit with them in Brainerd for a period. The roads were in excellent shape and especially noticeable is the large amount of improvement work on the Minnesota Scenic highway, Gull lake road, etc. The influx of tourists near Akeley is large. There was low temperature in the Akeley country last Friday night, but the damage was not very serious. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson at one time lived in Brainerd when Mr. Peterson traveled for the Hormel Packing company.

Important Experiment.

Domestic production of chaulmoogra oil, long used in Asia for the treatment of leprosy, is made possible through a consignment of seeds of the Hydnocarpus tree, sent from Siam to the bureau of plant industry. They will be experimentally propagated in Florida, Porto Rico and Hawaii. The oil formerly was obtained only from seeds of another tree grown in Burma.

Preparing Soil for Tobacco.

For the purpose of tobacco growing the soil must be thoroughly cleared of weeds, seeds and insect larva before the plants are set out. Old practice was to build fires over the surface, but the operation is now accomplished by means of a canvas cover under which live steam from a road roller is projected. A high temperature is maintained for two hours.

Blind Piano Fixer.

The pianos of the schools of Philadelphia are tuned and cared for by a blind man whose time is entirely taken up by his visits to one school building after another. He not only tunes the instruments, but he goes over the exterior and polishes the cases and keeps them looking like new.
